

Why Advertise in Goat Rancher?

Since 1996, Goat Rancher magazine has served goat producers, breeders, homesteaders, agricultural businesses and livestock enthusiasts. We are proud to remain the only magazine — print or digital — devoted exclusively to goat farming. That distinction gives advertisers a rare opportunity to reach a focused audience of producers and decision-makers seeking products, services and equipment for goat operations.

We invite you to advertise with Goat Rancher during our 30th anniversary year and put your message before readers who are most likely to value what your company offers. Whether you want to build brand recognition, introduce a new product or strengthen your presence in the livestock market, Goat Rancher provides a targeted platform that broader agricultural publications cannot match.

Your advertising also helps sustain a trusted, independent voice for the goat industry. Like many specialized agricultural publications, Goat Rancher depends on advertising support to continue producing practical articles, producer stories, market information, herd health features and other resources our readers rely on each month. By advertising with us, you are not only promoting your business — you are helping keep an important resource available to the goat-farming community.

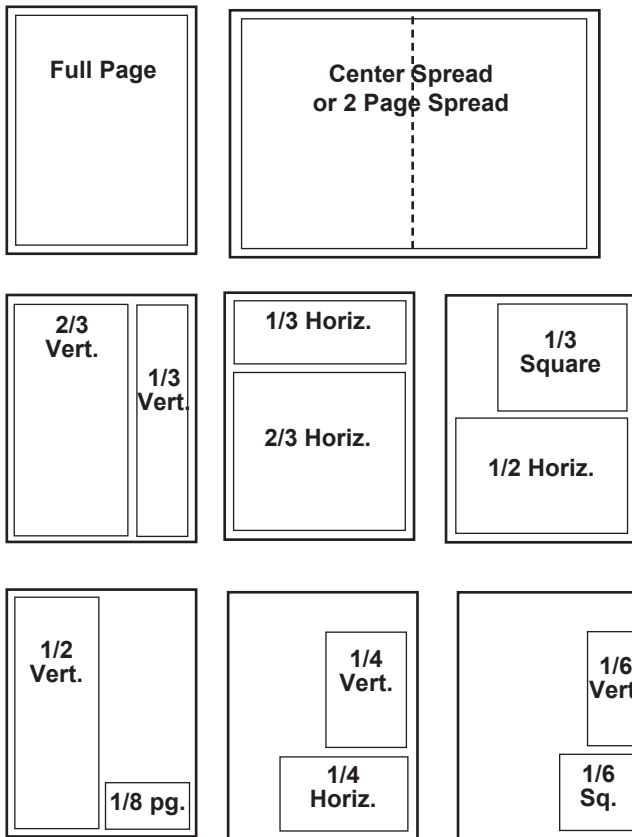

We offer advertising opportunities for businesses of many sizes and would welcome the chance to help you choose the placement that best fits your goals and budget. Our 30th year is the perfect time to connect with readers who are passionate about goats and committed to investing in their farms, herds and operations.

GOAT RANCHER EDITORIAL CALENDAR

Throughout its history, Goat Rancher has been news and event-driven, covering the major developments in the meat goat industry in a timely manner. Each issue contains the latest news from major shows and sales, current marketing trends and the latest developments in health and nutrition. In addition, each issue also focuses on a topic of interest to our varied readership. Our monthly topics are listed below:

JANUARY — KIDDING

Articles in this issue focus on the health, nutrition and management of the doe herd and newborn offspring.

FEBRUARY — FENCING/MAINTENANCE

Spring is just around the corner. Ranchers are making plans for that next fencing project, patching up the barn roof or building a bigger feed shed.

MARCH — HOMESTEADING

Millions of Americans are raising a garden, canning their own vegetables or producing goat meat and milk for their families. We take a look at this growing trend to be self-sufficient in uncertain times.

APRIL — OTHER BREEDS

This edition looks at other breeding options — including Myotonics, TexMasters, Pygmies and more — and the people who raise them.

MAY — KIKOS

Our annual spotlight on the Kiko, a breed of goat developed in New Zealand that continues to grow in popularity. This issue highlights Kiko breeders and Kiko events planned for the summer and fall.

JUNE — SIRE EDITION

An opportunity for breeders to spotlight & promote their best herd sires. This issue is distributed free at the national Boer goat shows.

JULY — CUISINE

Focus on goat meat eatery: where to get it and how to prepare it, including home-tested recipes, side dishes and more.

AUGUST — NICHE MARKETING

Goat farmers sell meat, soap, cheese, fiber products and more through farmer's markets, mail order, websites, trade shows and flea markets.

SEPTEMBER — SPANISH GOATS

Features articles from Spanish goat producers as well as genetics experts. This issue includes a special advertising section for Spanish goat breeders.

OCTOBER — FEED & FORAGE

Whether planting winter pastures, storing hay or buying grain, goat producers across the nation begin making plans for the winter season.

NOVEMBER — SAVANNA GOATS

This edition features the South African import and its growing popularity — including a special advertising section for breeders.

DECEMBER — PREDATORS/GUARDIANS

Advice and new developments on how to protect livestock from predation and the types of predators that could threaten your herd.
